“For 20 years, my father was a firefighter. He was a battalion chief and the bravest man I ever knew.

“Then he got leukemia. The doctors traced it to chemicals he was exposed to as a firefighter. It was curable.”

“But the insurance company didn’t want to pay for the expensive treatment ... they kept delaying until he died. That’s when they finally approved the treatment.

“My father would have given his life in the line of duty. Turns out the insurance company took it instead.”
